AT to Promote UDL & Support Executive Functioning Skills in Learners with ASD to Increase Independence

Facilitated by: Dr. Rachel Wright – Ph.D

November 7, 2018

9:00 AM - 3:00 PM

Hilton Garden Inn (Champaign)

Little Chief Room

1501 South Neil Street
Champaign, IL 61820

Who Should Attend? This session is designed for SLPs, OTs, Gen. Ed. Teachers, Sp. Ed. Teachers, Parents, Paraprofessionals, Social Workers and Administrators.

What Is It? This session explores potential applications for cutting-edge technologies, such as augmented reality (AR), wearable devices, and the Internet of Things (IoT) as assistive technologies to provide both Universally-Designed instruction and support for executive functioning skills in learners with autism spectrum disorders in order to increase independence across settings. Each technology will be presented according to the Universal Design for Learning (UDL) guidelines, easy, ready-to-go uses will be demonstrated, and hands-on opportunities to create content will be provided. Participants will learn how coordination of these increasingly mainstream technologies can be used to promote independence and the self-management of supports, while remaining highly customizable for the specific needs of the individual user that can be changed over time.

Financial Disclosure: Rachel Wright is being paid an honorarium and travel expenses for this presentation. Non-Financial Disclosure: Rachel Wright has no relevant nonfinancial relationships.

Outcomes

Participants will:

- define Augmented Reality (AR), explain how AR can be used to meet each of the three UDL guidelines, and demonstrate the process for creating AR content.
- identify ways that AR, wearable devices, and the Internet of Things can be implemented to match levels of support for an individual's changing needs.
- explain the potential uses for the presented technologies to support self-directed learning.
- explain the potential uses for the presented technologies to support self-management of supports and executive functioning skills.
